	Dear,
1	I am sixteen and my parents are driving me crazy. They have a million rules and regulations. I have an 11:00 curfew. (all my friends have a 12:00 curfew!) I can only go out one night during the weekend, and my parents have to know where I am every minute I'm out. My dad even calls or comes by to check if I'm where I said I would be. If I'm not, I get grounded and also get the car I'm paying for taken away. I make good grades, I've never been in serious trouble, and I have a part-time job. My parents treat me like a criminal! How can I get them to lighten up?

0	I am a senior and will graduate from high school in a few months. I have been dating Kyle since ninth grade. We are really in love and want to get married after graduation. Kyle graduated last year and works for his father in a family owned business. My parents are really upset with me. They think I'm too young to get married and want me to go to college for at least two years and get some kind of degree. All I want to do is get married to Kyle and have my own home. Kyle's parents are supportive and have offered to pay our rent on an apartment for a year as a wedding present. I want a beautiful wedding and my parent's support. My Dad said that he would not pay for my wedding or even come to one. I think they've forgotten what it means to be young and in love. How can I change their minds?

	Brad is considered to be the best looking guy at my school. I was shocked when he asked me out—I'm not one of the popular cheerleader types. I love Brad very much—but there is a scary side to his personality. He gets very depressed and sometimes threatens to kill himself if I don't go along with what he wants to do (drugs, sex, drinking). My parents can't stand Brad and I've lost most of my friends because Brad doesn't want me to go places with them anymore. Now I'm really scared. Last week Brad hit me when I told him that my parents were making me go on vacation with them for a week. I am sick of the lies I have to tell my parents and I'm getting really scared of Brad, even though I love him. I'm afraid he will commit suicide if I break up with him. What should I do?
